The Cornerstones of Love and Logic for Toddlers

- Setting Clear and Enforceable Limits: Establish firm boundaries that define acceptable and unacceptable behavior. Avoid over-negotiating or giving in to tantrums.
- Providing Choices with Limits: Offer toddlers the opportunity to make choices within a set framework of limitations. This empowers them while teaching them the consequences of their actions.
- Using Natural and Logical Consequences: Allow your toddler to experience the natural consequences of their behavior, such as cleaning up a spilled drink. This helps them learn from their mistakes and develop a sense of accountability.
- Building a Relationship of Respect: Model respect for your toddler's feelings and opinions, even when you're disciplining them. Listen to their perspectives and validate their emotions.
- Maintaining a Positive and Loving Environment: Discipline should not be used as punishment, but rather as guidance and support. Create a home where your toddler feels valued, loved, and respected.
